Jonathan Rauwerda is a certified Behavior Therapist, and founder of Behavioral Consulting LLC, a company focused on addressing the behavioral needs of children, teens, and adults with developmental and learning disabilities. Jonathan enjoys working closely with the individuals and families he serves, helping reduce maladaptive behaviors, improving social skills, and helping individuals reach their full potential. Jonathan has worked in the field of behavior analysis for over seven years, and has held various consulting positions within the social services field over the past 10 years. Due to his extensive background, he has a strong knowledge of both the behavioral and social services fields.

Jonathan currently consults for a number of non-profit social service agencies within Illinois, as well as, offers in home services for those in the Chicago, North Shore, and Western Suburbs of Illinois. He is a certified Safety Care instructor (a program designed to teach strategies to prevent and manage behavioral challenges), leads weekly social skill classes, sits on the Adult Down Syndrome Clinic Advisory Board, and has presented on various behavioral topics throughout his career.

Jonathan resides in Elmhurst, IL with his wife and young daughter. He enjoys running, kayaking, traveling, watching the Blackhawks, and spending time with his wife and daughter.
